Modern History

Year 9 | Term 1

Life in Nazi Germany

1 – Women	2 – Children	3 – Nazi policies	4 – Terror Tactics	5 – Minority groups	6 – Opposition
Aryan: a Germanic race the Nazis believed was superior to others <ul style="list-style-type: none"> During the 1920s, German women had enjoyed more liberal lives e.g. drinking and smoking. In the 1930s, Nazism said that women should return to traditional roles. They encouraged the 3 Ks (Kinder (children), Kuche (kitchen), Kirche (church)). Women were expected to have several Aryan children. Women were to wear plain clothing, no make-up and have their hair tied up. In 1933, Hitler gave newlyweds 1,000 marks, allowing them to keep 250 marks for every child they had. The Motherhood Cross was given to women who had children. 	propaganda: methods to influence how someone thinks eugenics: the study of reproduction <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The Nazis believed children were important. He influenced them through: school, propaganda, and youth groups. Textbooks, especially history and biology, were written to promote Germany, Aryans and anti-Semitism. Eugenics was taught in all schools. Boys mostly learnt history, eugenics and PE. They attended the Hitler Youth where they were prepared for the army. Girls mostly learnt housework, eugenics and PE. They attended the League of German Maidens where they were prepared for motherhood. 	policy: a set of ideas or plans <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Not all Germans were Nazis. The Nazis tried to keep these people under control, using positive and negative methods. From 1933 Hitler promised 'bread and work', and full employment. He used unemployed men between 18 and 25 years old to build the 1936 Berlin Olympic Stadium. From 1935 onwards, men were conscripted into the army. He wanted Germany to be self-sufficient – autarky. The Nazis introduced a programme called 'Strength Through Joy' – this rewarded workers with theatre trips, picnics and holidays. Hitler designed the Volkswagen (the people's car) for German workers to buy (although car production stopped when the Second World War started in 1939). 	terror: keeping someone in a state of fear <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The Nazis also frightened people into supporting them. The SS (Schutzstaffel) was Hitler's private army. He used them as an execution squad on his opponents and as guards in concentration camps. The Gestapo were the secret police. Over 150,000 people reported anti-Nazi behaviour to them. The Gestapo did not wear uniform, so Germans didn't know who / where the Gestapo were. Their tactics included murder and torture. Heinrich Himmler was the head of the SS and police. 'People's Courts' charged the Nazi's enemies with treason without a trial. 	minority: a group of people different than the main group <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Hitler believed in the superiority of the Aryan Race. The Nazis hated particular 'undesirable' groups such as: Jews, Gypsies, homosexuals, disabled people, Poles, and political opponents. Many of these groups were sterilised to stop them having children. Between 1939 and 1941 over 100,000 disabled Germans were killed in secret, without the consent of their families. Millions were sent to concentration camps. 85% of Germany's Gypsies died in camps. These groups wore different coloured triangles to show other prisoners who they were. 	oppose: to go against someone/something <ul style="list-style-type: none"> There were a few individuals and groups who openly opposed Hitler and his policies. The majority ended up in concentration camps, while many were killed. Some Catholic priests opposed Hitler. Many Protestant pastors, led by Martin Niemöller, formed the Confessional Church in opposition to Hitler's Reich Church. The Swing Kids challenged the Nazi image of youth by growing their hair and wearing fashionable clothes and listening to Swing music. The White Rose published anti-Nazi leaflets but were discovered and executed in 1943. The Edelweiss Pirates painted anti-Nazi slogans, sheltered deserters and beat up Nazi officials.
